A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT...

POUND SEIZURE LAW

I strongly request all of our members and friends to support House Bill 1141, which is currently before the Massachusetts Legislature. This Bill will repeal Chapter 49A, the so-called Pound Seizure Law.

Again this year we will testify at the public hearings in support of this legislation, but we need your individual support. Your response to this same request last year was wonderful, but, unfortunately, our efforts were unsuccessful. However, this is another year and we have positive hopes for the repeal of Chapter 49A in this Legislative session.

I urge that you write to your own State Representatives and Senator to support H-1141, without any weakening amendments. In addition, you may also write to the House Chairman of the Committee on Counties, Charles Flaherty, at the State House, Boston, Massachusetts 02133.

We support this legislation because we believe that:

- 1) Public pounds and animal shelters should not be compelled by State Law to provide pets entrusted to their care for experimental use. The ANIMAL RESCUE LEAGUE HAS NOT AND WILL NOT SURRENDER PETS FOR THIS PURPOSE. The function of these shelters is to remove lost, unwanted, or abandoned animals from danger and provide for their comfort and safekeeping until they are reunited with their owners, placed in new homes, or humanely euthanized. The surrender of animals for purposes not for the benefit of the animals released, including experimentation, has never been a part of the principles motivating the operation of animal shelters.
- 2) The public confidence in services provided by pounds, animal shelters and animal control officers continues to be seriously eroded when "Pet Seizure" laws exist.
- 3) Lost pets from pounds are psychologically, physically and medically unfit for research purposes.

Finally, I respectfully suggest that this issue is not the legality of properly conducted medical research, which is well established. Rather the issue is that unfortunate animals who have been raised as PETS, and subsequently become lost or unwanted, are unfit laboratory subjects and should not be used for research purposes.

To help some homeowners prevent or solve some problems with animals, mostly wild life, here are some of the more common problems, and their solutions. Should you have other solutions please send them to me so that we can expand our services to others. Should you have a problem that might not be listed, please write to us and we will try to help with the solution.

ANIMAL PESTS... PROBLEMS and SOLUTIONS

by Donald Westover

Garbage strewn about. Culprits: raccoon, skunk, dog, bird.

Solution:

Keep garbage in tight metal or heavy plastic cans, not just plastic bags. Use household ammonia, 1 cup per barrel per week. Wipe covers with ammonia or put fasteners on can or put cans in a rack.

Holes through foundation or under foundation. Culprits: skunk or opossum.

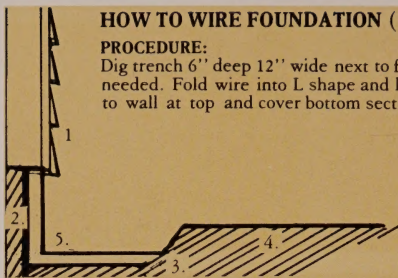

Solution:

(Figure 1) Wire the foundation. Be sure to check that animal is out of crawl space before sealing tightly. Sprinkle flour around hole using a sifter to determine if hole is being used and by what.

HOW TO WIRE FOUNDATION (Fig. 1)

PROCEDURE:

Dig trench 6" deep 12" wide next to foundation. Do entire house if needed. Fold wire into L shape and lay into trench. Fasten wire to wall at top and cover bottom section with soil to ground level.

1. Side of house
2. Foundation
3. 1 foot wide trench
4. Ground level
5. 1"X2" mesh wire

Shingles torn off building near steps, porch or near drain spouts 4" or more in diameter. Culprit: Dog chasing rabbits

Solution:

Rabbits hide under porch or steps or even go into 4" drains to escape from dogs. Dogs smell the rabbit and scratch or chew wood trim and shingles trying to get the bunny. Cover all openings with wire to prevent rabbits from getting in or under.

Strange noises in chimney or fireplace. Culprits: Birds, squirrels, raccoon. Could even be a duck or cat.

Solution:

Birds, squirrels or others, except raccoon, fall into chimney and cannot get out. They must be removed through the damper. Let professionals take squirrels out. You can remove cats or birds. Raccoons like the smoke shelf in chimney, for a nest. They must also be removed by a professional or leave them alone. Mother coon will remove kits when ready, about 6 weeks. To stop all of this, cover chimney top with a grille or 1" x 2" mesh galvanized wire. (Figure 2) Do not light a fire!

Lawn dug up. Culprit: Skunk

Solution:

Spray lawn with Diazinon to get rid of grubs. Skunks will move to greener pastures.

Rabbits in flower garden.

Solution:

Place a lot of short, wide mouth jars, open of course, in garden. Why it works no one knows, but it does. This is an old Nordic trick, and one supposition is that the rabbits are frightened away by the reflections from the glass jars.

Deer eating shrubs.

Solution:

Hang clumps of human hair around the shrubs. Ask your barber or hairdresser for excess cuttings. The theory here is that the scent of the hair warns the deer of human presence.

Woodpeckers knocking your house down?

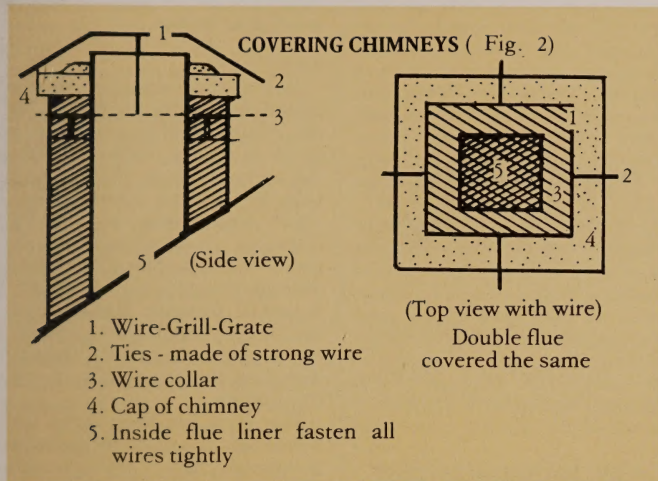

Solution:

Place silhouette cutouts of birds of prey; hawks, falcons around house; hang from trees so they move. Also good to keep small birds from flying into plate glass windows.

Squirrels in attic.

Solution:

Load attic with moth flakes. Check gutters and ventilation grilles for openings and wire them.

PHILIPPINES CRUELTY TO DOGS

1982 Update

from the World Society for the Protection of Animals

by James Pfeiffer

In November 1981, WSPA sent two Field Officers (myself and Victor Watkins-London) to the Philippines to investigate the dog trade and other related animal welfare matters. We remained in that country for a period of four weeks.

Background...

International attention to the inhumane treatment of dogs in the Philippines occurred as a result of widely publicized photographs showing dogs being sold for human consumption, which were taken in 1980 in Cagayan - a rural province in northern Luzon. Since that time, several newspapers in England, Australia, Europe, Canada and the United States have published highly emotional articles depicting the gross suffering of the animals.

Dog meat has been eaten for hundreds of years throughout Southeast Asia, and in the Philippines this practice originated and takes place principally in the cold, mountainous regions of the northern area of the island of Luzon, where it is believed that eating dog meat has a warming effect on the body. The blood is also often consumed because it is thought to have medicinal and healing qualities.

The consumption of dog meat began in some of the central areas of Luzon when mountain people migrated south. In these regions, as well as in the more populous northern areas such as Baguio and Tuguegarao, dog meat is considered a delicacy and is more expensive than either beef or pork. Dogs are specifically bred for the purpose of human consumption, although dognapping of pets for food does take place.

In some areas the dogs are very cruelly trussed, having their forelimbs forced and tied behind their backs, with a tin can used as a muzzle. The usual method of transport and holding is in cages, and the dogs may travel considerable distances by road, sea and rail in cramped conditions for several days.

It is inaccurate to brand all Filipinos as "dog eaters", as has been implied by many of the press accounts. The majority of Filipinos do not eat dog meat; and the abundance of healthy pet dogs observed during the investigation, as well as the vocal abhorrence of the practice by many local residents, bears this out.

Action Taken by WSPA...

Although the eating of dog meat may be offensive to many people in the western world, it is unlikely that the practice will be eliminated or significantly reduced for quite some time. For this reason, WSPA's initial goal was to eradicate cruelty to the dogs during transportation, holding and slaughter by having the anti-cruelty law of 1929 enforced. In this regard, the WSPA Field Officers presented the Deputy Prime Minister with copies of the Philippines Anti-Cruelty Act, together with proposals banning the trussing of dogs and stipulating that their slaughter take place in approved and inspected abattoirs only. Minister Rono forwarded copies of the above to all mayors in the municipalities where dogs are known to be eaten, requesting enactment of similar legislation. He also alerted the national police chiefs in those areas to enforce the anti-cruelty law. As the existing anti-cruelty laws are outdated, commitments were secured from two influential legislators and the Deputy Secretary-General for Legislative Affairs to introduce updated anti-cruelty measures, which should occur shortly. Copies of model anti-cruelty laws from other countries were provided by WSPA for consideration.

The longest range goal was to strengthen humane education programs so that the humane treatment of all animals will be a matter of regular practice rather than legal coercion. In this regard, the Deputy Minister of Education agreed to utilize WSPA humane information in the schools, and provide regular radio time for the Philippines S.P.C.A.

On a day-to-day basis, Philippine animal welfare problems will be best dealt with by the Philippine animal welfare interests, with the assistance from outside groups such as WSPA. Fortunately, the existence of the Philippines S.P.C.A. provides such a function.

The Philippines S.P.C.A., situated in Manila, maintains an animal clinic where approximately 8,000 domestic animals are treated annually. The Philippines S.P.C.A., which once obtained funding from the government and its members, now receives money only from the owners of the animals which have been treated there. Membership is non-existent. At meetings with the Board of Directors, WSPA Field Officers agreed to assist in strengthening the S.P.C.A. by supplying them with a wide variety of materials relating to public relations, organizational development, humane education and clinical program information. Material aid, including technical equipment, veterinary supplies and a small ambulance will be provided given sufficient funds can be obtained. Measures were also taken to assist the Philippines S.P.C.A. in obtaining law enforcement powers.

WSPA Field Officers also visited a councilwoman in the municipality of Tuguegarao in the northern part of the Philippines, who expressed an interest in establishing an S.P.C.A. in that area. Through the assistance of WSPA, liaison was made between this individual and the Philippines S.P.C.A., and it was agreed that the new society would become the first branch of the Philippines S.P.C.A.

As dogs are not officially recognized as food animals, they do not come under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Animal Industries, which regulates the transportation and slaughter of food animals. During discussions with the Bureau, it was decided that WSPA will submit recommendations on the transport, holding and slaughter of dogs for consideration by the Bureau.

A further field trip to the Philippines is planned later this year to monitor progress and to ensure that commitments have been carried through.

Realistically, it is one matter to identify the problems, and quite another to enact reforms and supply technical and material assistance. The amount of aid WSPA can devote to this project is entirely dependent upon the support received from the public. Individuals or organizations interested in assisting or receiving further information are invited to contact WSPA, 29 Perkins Street, P.O. Box 190, Boston, MA 02130. Telephone: (617) 522-7000.

ANNUAL REPORT 1981

Despite increasing financial pressures, the League was able to provide services for a total of 85,833 animals in 1981, an increase of over 2,000 from the previous year. Visits to the Boston outpatient clinic for small animals rose from 7,164 in 1980 to 8,828, and the number of animals cared for in each of the League's shelters, in Boston, Salem and Brewster, was significantly higher than the previous year.

These accomplishments were made possible only by the support of over 12,000 concerned members whose continued assistance is the cornerstone of the League's humane service programs. During 1981, 3,550 new members and donors joined in these ongoing efforts to help those that cannot help themselves.

Perhaps the most significant of the figures to emerge from 1981 though was the increase in the number of lost pets returned to their owners and, most encouraging, a significant rise in the number of pets placed in new homes. 1,098 lost pets were returned, an increase of about 200 over the previous year, while adoptions rose by 21%, with a total of almost 4,000 animals happily settled in with their new families during 1981.

One contributing factor to the expanding success of adoption efforts was undoubtedly the Acre Farm Hearing Dog Center in Stow. The League is providing dogs through its shelter to be trained to assist those with hearing impairments, in addition to providing free consultation and veterinary care to the American Humane Association sponsored program.

The League's inspection and investigation staff handled a total of 1,178 cases involving over 49,000 animals. These included routine inspections of fairs, pet shops, livestock auc-launching in Spring of 1981 of a weekly news feature on WNAC-TV, channel 7, noon news featuring the League's education and information coordinator, Sarah Friedrichs. In addition to providing pet care tips, Ms. Friedrichs each week introduces the viewers to some of the many young animals waiting at the League's shelters for someone to give them a home.

Summer saw the start of another major new program, with the opening of the Red tions and other areas where animals are housed commercially, as well as individual abuse, neglect and emergency situations. Many animals other than dogs and cats are aided by these and other League services. In Salem, for example, agents were called upon to rescue a muskrat caught in a fence, and to pick up a turkey loose on route 1, which was eventually placed on a farm in West

Peabody. Agents on Cape Cod regularly handle calls dealing with a wide variety of small wildlife (see article on page 4 for some of their pointers), and animals involved in emergency calls to the Boston shelter this year included a hawk, a seagull and even a camel!

The League was also involved in efforts to pass a number of humane legislation bills during 1981, including the Guard Dog License Bill signed in January, 1982 (see News-front). Despite enormous support from League members and other concerned individuals and groups, efforts to repeal the controversial Pound Seizure Bill were unsuccessful in 1981, but we have every confidence that, with renewed effort and support, this vital action will be passed in 1982.

Efforts to foster and promote humane attitudes among all people, but especially youngsters in their formative years, continue to be a major focus at the League. With ongoing programs such as the Animal Friends Summer School, the annual pet show, school programs, the Animal Friends newsletter, Our Fourfooted Friends, and pet care articles in news papers across the state, the League continues to raise the quotient of concern, teaching people that the way to love animals is to learn about them.

LOST PETS FOR RESEARCH

DID YOU KNOW IF YOUR PET WERE TO GET LOST IN MASSACHUSETTS HE COULD EASILY END UP AT A RESEARCH INSTITUTION WITHIN TWO WEEKS!!

HELP STOP THIS! SUPPORT H-1141

A State Law since 1957, CHAPTER 49A, authorizes the seizure of unclaimed PETS from Massachusetts animal pounds by licensed research institutions. Humane societies have long taken the position that public and private animal shelters should not be forced to surrender animals entrusted to their care. The Animal Rescue League of Boston has not, and will not surrender any animals for this purpose.

H-1141 pending in the Committee on Counties in Massachusetts legislature would stop the use of pets in research. Please join us in supporting this important bill.

HEARING DOG JOINS NEEDHAM FAMILY

David and Natalie Nash with Reddy.

Reddy, the Nash family of Needham's newest addition, is more than just a well loved member of the family. He's the 6th trained hearing dog to be placed since the Red Acre Hearing Dog Center in Stow, Mass., opened last summer. Reddy's new role will be as "ears" for Joanna and David Nash, the profoundly deaf parents of three hearing children, David (8), Jason (6), and Natalie (3½). The Nashes depend on Reddy to respond to five sounds to which he was trained; a baby's cry, telephone ring, doorbell, alarm clock, and smoke alarm.

During the third week in February the family received the 14 month old dog, a neutered mixed-poodle, who was one of the Animal Rescue League's adoptable pets chosen for the training program. The dog has completed four months of obedience and hearing dog training prior to meeting its new family.

1) Expressing his thanks for "thirteen years of love and devotion which began in a little cage at your shelter," Jim Canavan of Reading submits this photo of the family pet, "Daisy." "She has stood by us through thick and thin, accepted and loved without question our two children (which many dogs consider an interference when they have been the 'child' for seven years,) and even now forgets herself and frolics like a puppy at times! There can't be many dogs like Daisy".

2) Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pearson of Lynn share this photo of their four-month old kitten "Sassy", adopted from the League's Salem shelter, "taking a rest with her friend 'Tom'". She is the cutest little thing as you can see. My dog is a dog that was lost a few years ago, and we gave him a home also," writes Mrs. Pearson.

3) "Shaney," owned by Dottie and Herb Carver of Newton Centre, makes a repeat appearance in Our Fourfooted Friends, having first been pictured here as a kitten, trying to play ping-pong. "Now he's grown up, and having become more mature, spends a lot of time in my briefcase as evidenced by the enclosed picture," the Carvers write.

DETROIT DOG IS WELL-ENDOWED

Adolph, a two-year old German Shepherd, is heir to a $10,000 estate, left to cover the costs of his lifetime care by his late owner, a wealthy Grosse Pointe widow. The attorney for the estate of Mrs. Patricia Roney said that the money is being invested and a court-appointed trustee will reimburse Adolph's new owner for the costs of his care. The court is presently looking for a family to adopt Adolph, a task that should not be too difficult in view of his generous dowry.

OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY CHARGED WITH ANIMAL ABUSE

Officials of the Federal Agriculture Department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service have filed charges against Ohio State University for abusing kittens in the University's research facilities, according to a UPI report. R.D. Stauffer, the Agriculture Department's area veterinarian for Ohio, said the charges allege that the University provided no veterinary care for about 40 kittens, some of which were found to have lesions on their necks, and metal chains with identification tags imbedded in the flesh of their necks.

CONNECTICUT DAIRY FARMER CHARGED WITH CRUELTY

Law enforcement officials from the Connecticut Humane Society this past winter confiscated by court order 87 severely weakened cows from a dairy farm whose owner was charged with cruelty in the deaths of 23 other cows. The dairy herd had been given no food or water for at least five days before the Humane Society found the animals, according to Frank Intino, chief of law enforcement, who added that the animals had been "neglected and given very little food for a long time before that." The owner, Warren Roberts, was arraigned in Bristol Superior Court and charged with 23 counts of cruelty, according to an Associated Press report.

FAMILIES WIN JOINT CUSTODY OF DOG

After an emotional court battle, Plymouth Superior Court Judge Augustus Wagner recently awarded two New England families joint custody of a 14-year old collie-shepherd they had both cared for, loved and regarded as their own. For the first 11 years of his life, "Teddy" had been the pet of the William Graham family of Duxbury. After he slipped off his leash and got lost, the Stanley Kroll family of Pembroke found the dog, rechristened him "Ginger," and cared for him for the next three years. Because of the age of the dog, and the involvement of children in both families, the judge decided that each family deserved the dog's company and "Teddy/Ginger" should spend alternate months in each household.

BASSET HOUND BRINGS HAPPINESS TO CAPE COD NURSING HOME

When the Ring family of Brewster had to seek a new home for their two-year old basset hound "Snoopy," the residents' council of Whitehall Manor Nursing Home in Barnstable unanimously voted to adopt the dog as a pioneer in pet therapy. The value of animals in promoting emotional health and happiness and reducing loneliness and depression has often been demonstrated and the nursing home's experience with "Snoopy" has been no exception. "I can't tell you how much pleasure that dog has brought us," said Francis (Bud) Hines, president of the residents' council, in an interview with the Cape Cod News. Mrs. Janice White, wife of the owner-administrator of Whitehall, reported that "during the short time Snoopy has been here she has befriended residents who don't have many visitors, has reduced the isolation of the bedridden as she makes her rounds and, by showing affection indiscriminately, has raised the self-esteem and spirit of the depressed. Whitehall can seriously recommend the adoption of a pet to other facilities, provided it prove as much of a charmer as Snoopy," Mrs. White concluded.

IN MEMORIAM

The officers, directors and staff of the Animal Rescue League of Boston mourn the death on January 14, 1982 of Dr. H. Dunster Howe, and extend their deepest sympathy to his family and friends. Dr. Howe, who had practiced dentistry in Boston for 37 years and was a clinical associate in oral surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital, had served as a director of the League since 1975 and was strongly committed to the animal welfare movement.

VICIOUS ATTACKS SPARK MOUNTAIN LION RUMORS ON CAPE COD

Residents of North Truro were alarmed and frightened this winter by a series of incidents that lent credence to rumors of a wild creature, perhaps a mountain lion, stalking local domestic animals and house pets. At first, chickens were killed, then cats reported missing were found slaughtered, then the ravaged bodies of several deer and a wild dog were found. After a 150-pound Cape boar was attacked and slashed so badly that it had to be destroyed, rumors began to spread. A couple reported having seen a strange creature in the woods back in the fall: "It stood about two feet high... about 60 to 80 pounds. It was all brown in color, and it had a long, ropelike tail, like a cat...it had a very definite cat face...a small head, small ears and whiskers." Despite the rumors and attacks, humane officials on the Cape, including Animal Rescue League representatives, believe that the attacks were committed by wild dogs and stress that there is no real evidence to support the presence of a mountain lion on the Cape.

NEW STATE LAW PROTECTS GUARD DOGS

Effective this April, a new law signed by Governor Edward King in January will require the licensing of guard dog businesses by the State Department of Agriculture. Prior to this, there were no state laws or regulations addressing the inhumane conditions which frequently occur in this business. Cruel training practices, unsanitary living conditions, lack of medical attention, and deprivation of food and water were frequently cited guard dog abuses. Several Massachusetts guard dog business operators have been convicted of cruelty, but due to the lack of adequate laws, were allowed to continue to train, sell and lease guard dogs. The new legislation, sponsored by Representative Richard T. Moore (Democrat, Uxbridge,) will correct this problem, and also require the Department of Agriculture to promulgate regulations for the training, kenneling, transportation and general well-being of these dogs. The Animal Rescue League and the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will be responsible for inspection and law enforcement.

In addition to animals specifically raised as guard dogs, family pets have also been the victims of the past lack of regulation. Pet owners have paid several hundred dollars to have their dogs trained, turning their pets over to a guard dog school. Because of unregulated practices, some dogs have been returned to their owners in poor health, temperamentally a threat to their families and no longer suitable as pets.
